RESTAURANT ROI SHEET

What missed calls are really costing your restaurant

I'll take that order!

Every Missed Call Is a Lost Takeout Order.

During a Friday dinner rush, the phone rings while your team is slammed. No one picks up. The caller doesn't leave a voicemail — they just order takeout from the restaurant down the street instead. Multiply that by every busy night, and it adds up. (This sheet covers takeout and delivery calls only.)

LOST REVENUE

Every unanswered call during a rush is a takeout or delivery order that goes to a competitor instead of you.

Example:

Miss just 2 calls a night worth $40 each in takeout orders — that's $80/night, or roughly $2,400/month, gone.

LOST TIME

Every call your staff stop to answer is time pulled away from the kitchen, the register, or the table in front of them.

Example:

20 calls/night at 2 minutes each is 40 minutes/night of staff time — over 20 hours a month spent on the phone, not on guests.

LOST CUSTOMERS

Calls after close, during rush, or on a night you're short-staffed all sound the same to the caller: nobody answered.

Reality:

A customer who gets no answer rarely calls back — they just order takeout somewhere else, and you never know it happened.

Figures above are illustrative examples, not guaranteed results — use the worksheet below with your own numbers.
